

Elite Security Services Introduces Digital Cellular Backup Technology for their Glendale Home Security Systems Customers Without Landline Telephone.

The Glendale home security systems industry is abuzz with the recent introduction of digital cellular technology to the Elite package from Elite Security Services. This advanced technology would help households avail round the clock domestic protection facility without a landline telephone connection.

Elite Security Services, nation's leading provider of domestic security service, have just beefed up their Glendale home security systems with the addition of digital backup technology to their Elite package. This technology is one of the most recent innovations in the home protection industry and allows users to enjoy undisturbed security service without a basic telephone connection. Elite Security Services presently offers their service all over the United States and Canada for an economical price range. Within a year in the industry, they have emerged as the top home security service provider in this part of the world. Apart from the Elite plan, the company has two more service packages for their customers.

The introduction of this new technology is a significant step ahead for the Glendale home security systems industry because conventional security plans require a landline telephone in order to communicate with their monitoring stations. The enhanced Elite plan from Elite Security Services utilizes cellular communication to get in touch with the nearest monitoring stations. This technology would also be helpful for households with a landline connection because it enables systems to keep functioning even when the telephone lines are down. This package is now available in Glendale for a monthly rental of $44.99 per month.

Elite Security Services has been operating in Glendale since last one year. The company is owned and managed by acclaimed security consultant Paul Shakuri. While introducing this technology, he said, "We have been working on this technology for quite some time, and now we are ready to offer this benefit to all of you. Many households no longer use landline telephones but require domestic protection. This package has been designed specifically for those homeowners". Glendale home security systems industry experts have welcomed the introduction of this advanced technology by Elite Security Services.

About the Company: Elite Security Services is a rapidly growing company in the home security industry. They offer highly efficient and economical home security solutions in America and Canada.
