

STANLEY B. MCCAMMON

Stanley B. McCammon is President and CEO of Joshua Green Corporation, a diversified investment company holding a diversified stock portfolio, neighborhood shopping centers, office buildings, and other private market investments. It also owns Far Bank Enterprises, which is comprised of Sage Manufacturing Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary specializing in top-of-the-line fly fishing rods and reels, Redington, and Rio Products International, and Cuizina Food Company, a company producing high end soups and sauces. Mr. McCammon also serves as a trustee of the Joshua Green Foundation.

Prior to joining JGC in 2005, Mr. McCammon was President of Orca Bay Capital Corporation, a Seattle, Washington asset management company. Orca Bay's capital has been deployed in both the public and private securities markets. Mr. McCammon was also President and CEO of Orca Bay Sports & Entertainment, which owned the NHL Vancouver Canucks and General Motors Place. While at Orca Bay, Mr. McCammon served as an alternate governor at both the NHL and the NBA

As President and CEO of Orca Bay Sports & Entertainment, Mr. McCammon oversaw the effort to privatize the public company that formerly owned the Canucks; helped bring the NBA to Vancouver; and engaged in several hundreds of millions of dollars of financings involving the NHL, NBA, and stadiums.

Mr. McCammon was a co-founder and partner in Orca Bay Partners, a private equity fund investing in buyout, growth, and other private equity opportunities and which managed The Tahoma Fund. Mr. McCammon has served on the boards of several privately held institutions.

Mr. McCammon is a graduate of the University of Nebraska School of Business, and the Law Schools of the University of Nebraska and New York University, holding J.D. and LLM degrees. Prior to joining Orca Bay Capital, Mr. McCammon practiced law in Chicago and Seattle, primarily focusing on tax and business transactional matters. Mr. McCammon and his wife, Janet, live in Seattle with their two daughters after living in Nebraska, New York, and Chicago.