The Art, Science, Business, and Profession of Divorce Coaching

- Developing a specialty coaching focus
- Expanding your coaching skills
- Becoming a trusted champion in the different phases of the divorce process!

This is a decision to invest in yourself and your future. In our program you will develop sharper coaching skills than in most other coach training programs as well as the divorce coaching distinctions. If you can coach divorce, you can coach anything. People in our program have become better workplace coaches, relationship coaches, and better coaches in their other coaching endeavors.

Who Should Consider Becoming a Certified Divorce Coach?

- If you already have a coaching practice and want to develop a specialty area of coaching to stand out from the crowd
- If you have been through divorce yourself and want to share your learning with others and develop a fulfilling new profession
- If you are already a divorce professional and want to expand the scope of services offered to your clients.

What Makes Divorce Coaching Different from Other Coaching?

Multiple areas of change: relationships-family, friends, in-laws, grandparents, children, relationships as a couple, community engagement, housing, healthcare, finances, education, childcare, career-business, health and wellbeing, identity, and assuming new roles, to name a few!

Intensity of Emotions: denial, resistance, anger, numbness, isolation, aloneness, shame, getting even, getting out, hopelessness, resignation, and throwing in the towel.

*A Legal Process: The client is involved in a legal process with its own language and intricacies, stresses and difficulties. Understanding the boundaries between divorce coaching and other divorce professionals is important in gaining credibility and building referral partners.

- An activity that requires formal training;
- A set of standards to practice the activity- Standards of Ethics and Professional Responsibility;
- A community or association of individuals who are engaged in the activity to learn and share to strengthen the practice or activity;
- A sense of social responsibility and a duty to serve the needs of others;
- A commitment to continued education in the field of practice; and
- Some form of licensing and community policing or sanctioning of persons who stray from the ethics and professional responsibility.
