Valdata launches new software to cost formulations Software provider to the cosmetics industry, Valdata, has launched a new recipe management program that emphasizes both costing calculations, as well as a Cloud hosted version.

With formulators coming under increasing pressure to ensure that the formulation process is as efficient as possible, as well as being within budget, there is an increasing demand for more sophisticated tools to help make this process simpler.

Valdata's Recipe Manager Pro 2013 is an updated version of the existed software program that the company offers, which has been redesigned to give increased functionality and streamlining for the formulation process.

The additional functionalities that have been integrated into the updated software include:

- Streamlined installation process
- Easily track packaging options
- Improved costing calculations
- Multiple standard batch sheets to choose from
- Cloud/Hosted version available

The redesign builds on functionality that includes full process applications for each recipe, the elimination of formulation errors, omissions and mistakes, together with batch sheets that are generated according to processed information.

According to the company, the record for the results of batching includes raw material quantities consumed, yield produced, and lot tracking/tracing information.

Other key functionality of the software includes container level inventory tracking, scale connectivity, traceability, real time production and inventory data, the elimination of formulation errors and date delays, together with a fully documented audit trail.
