

Bryant Security Corporation Issues safety tips for back to school

In preparation for each school year, Bryant Security meets with school administrators and staff members throughout various South Florida schools. These routine meetings cover important safety and security issues such as school violence, reduction of safety risks, and bullying. “Back to school for us means readdressing security protocols and conducting security trainings. It’s high energy at the beginning of each school year, and it’s important to reiterate basic safety protocols with the staff and administration.” says Shay Ben-David, President of Bryant Security. The Miami private security company is currently meeting and training teachers and staff in various schools throughout the county. Mr. Ben-David mentions they are conducting tactical lockdown drills, which are a regular routine to assure everyone involved knows exactly what to do during emergency situations.

“We are only a few days in, but many schools have reported a smooth transition from summer to school year.” mentions Rene Zerquera, Operations Manager at Bryant Security. “Let’s keep it that way!” Rene says it’s important to be aware of school zones, expect police to be looking for speeders and strictly enforcing traffic laws in these school zone areas, especially crosswalks, and around school buses stopped to load or unload students. Speeding in a school zone? Get caught going more than 30 mph over the limit and the fines double to $555.50.

Mr. Zerquera has created a list of safety tips to keep in mind as the school year progresses:

- Know designated bus stop. Be accompanied by a parent until the bus leaves.
- Create a meeting place with parents. Always be at that spot, and keep cell phones on.
- For parents dropping kids off, don’t leave purse unattended in the drop off lane. Keep it close at all times.
- Give driving through school zones and car pools full attention. No cell phone use.
- Use crossing guards.

- Use the buddy system.
- Don't accept rides home from strangers, no matter what.
