Digiscribe Expands Sales & Technical Support Team
Three New Hires Help Meet Growing Demand for Document Management Services & Solutions

Elmsford, New York – December 5, 2013 – Digiscribe International today announces the addition of three new key employees. Two new salespeople and one new technical support specialist will help Digiscribe continue to meet the growing demand for document scanning services, document management solutions and workflow automation in the New York tri-state area.

Of the two sales hires, industry veteran Stuart Shilitz has provided enterprise information management technology solutions to large and mid-sized companies for 15 years. These solutions include document management, records management, workflow automation, and enterprise search technology across several verticals. Stuart helps clients define their information management strategies so they can experience reduced costs and risks associated with business processes. Stuart's previous experience includes tenure with Verity, OpenText, FAST Search (Microsoft), PowerSteering, and AvePoint.

The addition of a new technical support specialist deepens Digiscribe's ability to offer legendary levels of service in our document management software products. Digiscribe is unique among document management companies in having among the most experienced and certified technical support team for software implementation, training and development of workflow automation software schema.

"To continue providing excellence in service to an ever growing client base, we continue to expand our team in sales and technical support services," said Mitch Taube, president of Digiscribe International. "We look forward to seeing the positive impact these three new employees will have on our unique ability of identifying the optimal document scanning and document management solutions for our clients, and effectively servicing them following implementation."
