

Regulated by the FCA, Plus500 that offers competitive low fixed spreads, large number of tradable instruments, clutter free interface, a user-friendly trading platform, and easy withdrawal of profits, has caught the attention of ForexVestor.com's Stan Stevenson, prompting an investigative review.

"Headquartered in London, United Kingdom, has been trading for a decade. Set up by financial experts and trading professionals, this company that focuses specifically on the Forex market has quickly grown into one of the biggest and most trusted international brokers around," reports Stevenson. "Committed to international relationships, they have worked hard to solidify their reputation as being one of the best around and offer support in 20 different languages. Suitable for anybody, from a beginner to an advanced trader, the platform is very easy to understand."

Developed in-house, Plus500's trading platform is available in as a downloadable version, a web-based platform, and a mobile trading interface. Unlike those offered by most other brokers, Plus500's platform remains constant in all versions, which makes it possible to switch seamlessly between the platforms without having to regroup. This Forex trading platform provides all necessary information within one screen, so that there is no scrolling required to find necessary information. Four clearly labeled tabs on the top display details about past trades and current positions without having to search for it.

"For those who want to learn how the platform works before spending their own money, Plus500 offers a comprehensive free demo account and a £20 starter bonus, for which no deposit is required. Furthermore, when you do put down a deposit of your own money, you will be rewarded with an additional bonus of up to 30%," says Stevenson. "Plus500 uses their own trading platform, rather than having to rely on Mets Trader 4 like most others. They offer online access, a downloadable program, and a mobile app for their customers to trade on. Each of these work in sync, so you don't have to indicate which platform you are using when you make a trade."

"Plus500 Review offers a pretty comprehensive and exotic range of currency pairings. In addition to these Forex pairings, it offers an absolutely huge range of CFDs for its customers to trade. With this huge range of instruments, a decent list of ETFs, and a growing selection of major commodities, traders are certainly spoiled for choice when deciding what to trade. They offer one of the most comprehensive websites you will ever come across, including access through 20 different languages. If you need a good trading platform, I believe Plus500 is not just good, but actually great. It does offer a comfortable and comprehensive trading experience for those who prefer a no-frills trading platform."
