now eligible for coverage at preferential rates*

March 18, 2014 (WASHINGTON D.C.) – Clements Worldwide, the leading provider of international insurance solutions for expatriates and international organizations, today announced that it will work with the American Institute of Chemical Engineers (AIChE) to deliver guaranteed-issue term life insurance for all eligible AIChE members and their families living and working overseas.

Clements' global life insurance solution is the first of its kind to be made available to all AIChE members and their families who are currently living or working abroad. This provides them with vital financial security and peace of mind. Upon enrollment, international members are instantly protected by Clements' fully portable coverage with no required medical exams or lengthy underwriting and they will remain covered as long as they are an active member of the association until the age of 71.

In addition to comprehensive term life benefits like coverage for death due to illness, accidents or acts of terrorism and a dedicated team of customer service representatives, the innovative partnership between Clements and AIChE gives members access to a wide suite of additional international insurance solutions. With more than 45,000 members, AIChE is the world's leading organization for chemical engineering professionals.

"Adding AIChE to our rapidly growing list of association partners goes to the heart of what our global affinity programs are all about, namely providing peace of mind and financial protection worldwide. With AIChE's 45,000 members, we are leveraging their collective strength in numbers to offer life insurance solutions that are not typically available to individual customers," said Dante Disparte, Managing Director of Clements' U.S. operations.
