

The Adventurous Strategy Challenge of Carcassonne by Exozet

Now Available for Intel® Atom™ Tablets for Windows* 8.1

Game Developer Exozet has successfully partnered with Intel to enable Carcassonne, the exciting, tile-based board game for Intel® Atom™ tablets for Windows* 8.1. Based on the immensely popular German-style board game, the app can now deliver the medieval, territorial race to an expanding audience of mobile device users.

In medieval France, the land is largely untouched and ripe for development. The game board generates random tiles that players use to compose a map. Competitors accrue points as they build settlements and form communities by setting down so-called “Meeples.” The crystal clear graphics, atmospheric music and highly customizable game modes give the game added depth so each game requires new tactics. Gamers can play against clever AI opponents, or against up to five other players in a local (and soon online) multiplayer match.

The Carcassonne Experience Now Reaches a New Gaming Audience with Intel Atom Tablets for Windows* 8.1

Tablets provide fans of the award-winning board game with a whole new set of advantages. The high-resolution, sensitive touch screen enhances the satisfying drag-and-snap mechanism and sleek portability allows the ambitious intrigue to travel everywhere. The latest optimization with powerful Windows* 8.1 tablets brings the brilliant, multi-layered features of Carcassonne to life.

Now users can easily download the fantasy and begin to build their own virtual settlements with the versatility and mobility of Intel Atom tablets for Windows* 8.1. Carcassonne offers players enhancements and options only available with high performance mobile platforms. Easy portability and dependable functionality let the old-world adventure last.
