100% of the proceeds will go to the The Louis J Fox Center for Vision Restoration, a multidisciplinary research institute that acts as a bridge between three world class institutions – The University of Pittsburgh, The University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, and the McGowan Institute for Regenerative Medicine. The primary mission of the Fox Center is to focus on the restoration of sight through tissue regeneration, transplantation, and technology and combines efforts to innovate groundbreaking solutions in all areas of vision research. Current projects are making enormous strides in the fields of re-growing optic nerve tissue, cornea transplantation, stem cell therapies, and technological advancements, such as the revolutionary BrainPort device.
