"Sources of revenue and marketing for the Accounting Professional have been eroding. CPA Symposium is reversing that trend."

Traditional sources of revenue, generally resulting from tax and accounting practices, have been eroding largely due to the availability of new technology and software. Accountants know better than anyone else that to remain profitable, they must consistently develop fresh sources of growth and income.

Since 1949, CPA Symposium has been committed to working with CPA's in this effort. There is a rich history of partnering that is built upon mutual trust and a collaborative spirit. The opportunity to build and grow a successful Accounting and Financial Services Practice in this modern world has never been greater. Bringing people together of like mind and business knowledge has been the recipe for success.

CPA Symposium is leading the effort.
