University of Vermont Health Network

The University of Vermont Health Network was founded in October 2011 under the name Fletcher Allen Partners with an affiliation between Fletcher Allen Health Care and Central Vermont Medical Center.

In January 2013, CVPH Medical Center in Plattsburgh and Elizabethtown Community Hospital in Elizabethtown, New York joined the network through their parent company, Community Providers, Inc.

All four hospital organizations have transferred certain governance powers to the network Board of Trustees, formally linking them together under the parent organization.

On November 12, 2014, the partnership's name officially changed to The University of Vermont Health Network and three of the Partner hospitals - Central Vermont Medical Center, CVPH Medical Center and Elizabethtown Community Hospital - have added that to their existing names. Fletcher Allen Health Care changed its name to The University of Vermont Medical Center.

The University of Vermont Health Network at a Glance
Physicians: 1,063
    Specialists: 812
    Primary Care Providers: 251
Licensed Inpatient Beds: 1,161
Inpatient Discharges: 37,766 in FY 13
Almost 1.6 million Outpatient and Professional Office Visits in FY 13

Approximate Number of Employees
Central Vermont Medical Center: 1,500
CVPH Medical Center: 2,300
Elizabethtown Community Hospital: 190
UVM Medical Center: 7,000

Approximate Number of Inpatient Beds*
Central Vermont Medical Center: 80
CVPH Medical Center: 286
Elizabethtown Community Hospital: 25
UVM Medical Center: 447
*staffed beds

2014 Budget
Central Vermont Medical Center: $166M
CVPH Medical Center: $296M
Elizabethtown Community Hospital: $25M
UVM Medical Center: $1B

11/11/2014

UVMHealth.org