Mortenson Construction adds environmental construction executive

Continued growth in horizontal work drives top talent acquisition

Denver, Colo. (Jan. 12, 2014) – Mortenson Construction announces the addition of Larry Catalano to its senior leadership team as construction executive. Larry was most recently the manager of the Capital Projects Division for Aurora Water where he managed delivery of water, wastewater and stormwater projects for the City of Aurora, including the award-winning Prairie Waters Project. He has more than 30 years of experience managing, designing, constructing and operating water and wastewater facilities in Colorado and throughout the United States. Larry leads Mortenson's environmental market, with a focus on providing an exceptional experience for Mortenson's customers. Larry is a registered professional engineer and is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers where he was the recipient of the Pipeline Division's award for Engineering Excellence. He is also a member of the Water Environment Federation, American Public Works Association, and the American Water Works Association.
