Retained Search

An elaborate candidate profiling process that targets the best-matched talent and then filters them using advanced assessments. Preferable for the company in need of an exclusive search to fill leadership positions critical to overall organizational success.

Contingent Search

Uses a select database of candidates who can be presented to more than one company at the same time. Compensation is based on successful hire only.

Contained Search

Combines the flexibility of a contingent search method and the in-depth approach of a retained search method. Your organization gets exclusive, priority and optimized contingent search without being bound to a retained search model.
