

BizStanding Announces Unrivaled Tools for the Research of Business Mergers and Acquisitions

2017 Predicted to Set New Records for Business Activity as Rates and Markets Rise

BizStanding, the complete business directory, today announces a new set of tools to help business leaders perform their due diligence on prospective acquisition targets. The tools include a compilation of business formation records, the professional history of the owners, parent company names, Doing-business-as (DBA) relationships and affiliations. This combined set of tools aides in the complex research and discovery process preceding every business merger and acquisition.

2017 is widely expected to be the start of a very active business merger and acquisition trend. Conducive political attitudes, reductions in corporate regulations and the accumulation of vast liquid assets in most public companies are believed to be strong indicators. Some sources estimate that the S&P 500 businesses held more than $1.5 trillion in cash at the end of last year. With the ascension of Donald Trump and his new appointments, who seem to hold generally pro-business positions, tax on corporate overseas profits is expected to drop significantly. Additionally, the expected loosening of the Dodd-Frank Act, which made business lending burdensome and much less profitable, would open new options for small loans. This combined set of factors is could fuel an environment where smaller businesses to start their own round of consolidations.

These new tools help business development managers, financiers, insurance actuaries, and business owners of all types to research the corporate history of their targets more easily than ever before. The information assists in the evaluation of industry trend studies, forecasting, pricing comparisons, acquisition studies and founder biographies. BizStanding will become an unrivaled asset to assist large companies with big plans and small companies with limited resources who need identify and define corporate opportunities and challenges.

About BizStanding

BizStanding (<https://bizstanding.com/>) is a complete business directory that includes nearly every large and small business in the country.

The directory gives detailed contact information for all the businesses near you or across the country. It can even help you find company information you didn't know existed - like local home contractors without retail storefronts, growing regional companies without big advertising budgets, and contact information for large corporations that may hide their corporate details.
