

What others are saying about Listen to the Children:

“Now, more than ever, the core values of community, education and love are vital to our well-being and that of the planet. Stacy Pulice’s work highlights the tenets of Middle School—inspiring healthy, loving relationships, cultivating the intrinsic motivation to learn, and building strong communities to demonstrate why the sacred pursuit of knowledge, both of the world and one’s self, is a noble quest of the utmost importance.”

– Brian McWilliams, Headmaster, Santa Barbara Middle School

“No clearer example can be provided for colonization than the attempts forced upon our peoples to forever extinguish that flame that was gifted to each of us by our Creator. No man can undo the gift of Creation. Listen to the child, listen for his spirit, listen to his heartbeat, listen to his voice, for “out of the mouths of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength.”

– Katherine Whitecloud, Knowledge Keeper, elder, community leader with Wipazoka Wakpa Dakota Nation

“Stacy Pulice has written an essential book about Love; the love of humanity, the love of a holistic education, and the love of students and educators. She thoughtfully exposes the current underlying biases disenfranchising youth from a meaningful and life enhancing education and points to the four simple mindsets that can re-engage and re-animate teachers and students. Dr. Pulice offers us an educational future of an integrated and complete curriculum in which students and teachers never stop learning and become each other’s allies.”

– Dr. Jennifer Freed, Psychologist, author, speaker, and co-founder of the highly successful teen program AHA!
