TYRONE, Pa - Reclamere, Inc. recently announced the appointment of their CEO Angie Singer Keating, CISA, CISM, CIPP, CRISC as President of the global trade association, NAID, the National Association for Information Destruction. Her appointment was made public at the NAID 2018 Conference and Expo held in Nashville, TN. There NAID CEO Bob Johnson attributed Keating's new role to her well-known history of integrity and leadership within the industry.

“Having been largely responsible for bringing NAID into the realm of electronic media data security over the past decade, Angie's global reputation uniquely qualifies her to lead the organization. Reclamere Founder and President Joe Harford believes Angie's new role will highlight the benefit of female leaders and her passion for the secure destruction industry.

“Angie will make a great NAID President and role model for future female leaders. This new role really allows her to make a difference.”

Angie's summarized her passion for this new role and the industry, “Working with NAID has given me some of the most rewarding professional experiences over the past 17 years in the industry. NAID is unique in that it is a watchdog to the secure destruction industry for customers who use these services, but is also an industry advocate for organizations providing secure destruction services. From data security to safety to environmental protection, the NAID certification programs are rigorous, enforced, and highly respected worldwide. Being elected President by my industry peers is an incredible honor and I am working tirelessly to support them in every way that I can.”
