

MetroQuest Wins Top 10 Citizen Relationship Solution Provider Award

Government CIO Outlook has named MetroQuest as a best-in-class solution for enhancing citizen relationships by improving public engagement and decision making, while breeding a new civic culture.

Vancouver, Canada, January 17, 2019 – MetroQuest, the leader in online public engagement solutions for governments and planning firms, has been selected as a Top 10 Citizen Relationship Solution Provider by Government CIO Outlook, a technology magazine that focusses on the trends, challenges, and opportunities for CIOs to deliver technology-driven services and operations in enabling smart governance.

A distinguished panel – comprised of CEOs, CIOs, VCs, and analysts, alongside the Government CIO Outlook editorial board – recently reviewed and shortlisted the top companies at the forefront of tackling citizen relationship management challenges.

“We are honored to win this prestigious award and to have MetroQuest recognized as a vital online public engagement tool for today’s government to nurture better citizen relationships,” said Mike Walsh, President and CEO at MetroQuest. “With public trust in government under constant pressure, MetroQuest surveys help agencies foster positive relationships by involving citizens in planning for better transportation and more livable cities to improve their quality of life. MetroQuest surveys have been used by hundreds of agencies of all sizes, from the Texas Department of Transportation to the Metro Nashville Planning Commission, to engage thousands of people.”

MetroQuest is used by governments and planning firms to engage thousands of citizens in planning. Today’s preferred cloud-based public survey, MetroQuest delivers a highly visual and interactive online experience to educate residents about scenarios and tradeoffs, while collecting informed and quantifiable input. The resulting insights build support for the adoption of great urban and transportation plans that move more people and make cities better places to work, live, and play.
