Safety and liability go hand in hand with meeting current safety standards. These standards are continually changing – and it's important to consistently use the latest ones on your warnings. Otherwise, your product users, employees and your business may be at risk. With Clarion Safety's expertise, we can review the labels on your products or the signs in your workplace to ensure they're up-to-date, meeting today's requirements.

How Your Labels and Signs May Be Inadequate

Many product manufacturers and facility managers aren't using today's best practices for their safety labels and signs – both in individual cases as well as consistently across product lines and markets or company divisions and locations. This can lead to safety and liability issues. During assessments, we frequently uncover issues related to:

- Outdated label and sign designs and formats
- Lack of symbols or standards-based symbols
- Incorrect signal words related to the hazard
- Missing complete hazard information
- Overwarning and consolidation opportunities
