With some helpful floor markings and floor signs, the workplace can keep workers healthy while preventing further spread of a virus. It is important that workers wash their hands properly. It is also very important that workers maintain social separation rules whenever possible.

For example, many hospitals use our foot prints to maintain proper separation when using elevators or washing stations. Also many offices use our floor signs to remind employees how to properly wash their hands and cough into their elbows.

Please consider using our shapes and signs to keep your employees healthy. During flu seasons and virus outbreaks, it is very important to stay calm and to follow government health safety recommendations.
