

Wavestone US Appoints David Endicott as Managing Director

Former Providence Health & Services CTO David Endicott brings extensive healthcare, aviation, and travel experience to IT and business management consultancy Wavestone

Wavestone US is proud to announce the appointment of David Endicott as Managing Director. A transformative technology and business executive who has served at the C-level at Fortune 100 companies, Endicott brings to the position more than 30 years' experience in healthcare, aviation, and travel. He will support Wavestone's clients with expertise in application development and management, IT infrastructure, product management, and P&L management.

"Throughout his career, David has demonstrated a penchant for transformative innovation, and we believe his decades of cross-industry experience will bring tremendous value to our business and our customers. I am thrilled to welcome someone of David's caliber to our great roster of talent," says Jeff Vail, CEO, Wavestone US.

"With his wide range of expertise, David's participation will greatly enhance Wavestone US' capabilities, and bolster our core mission of helping business and IT leaders successfully deliver their most critical transformations and achieve positive outcomes."

Prior to joining Wavestone, Endicott held roles at Providence Health & Services, where he was Senior VP and CTO, at United Airlines, where he was Vice President of IT Infrastructure, Operations, and Engineering, and at US Airways/American Airlines, where he was Vice President of IT Infrastructure. He also spent many years at Sabre Holdings Corporation, advancing through several roles including Senior VP and CTO of Sabre Airline Solutions, and Vice President – Web Site and Systems Development at subsidiary, Travelocity.com.

"Wavestone's mission to help business and IT leaders be successful deeply resonates with me. Many companies are faced with a lot of unknowns in trying to navigate towards a new normal, and the firm's straight-shooting, peer-to-peer advisory approach is the kind of support that's necessary and practical in this environment. I am proud to be part of Wavestone's team of collaborative and innovative professionals," says Endicott.

Wavestone US is the North American arm of global management and IT consulting firm Wavestone. It has supported the transformations of more than 200 Fortune 1000 companies across a wide range of industries, offering a practitioner's perspective on IT strategy, cost optimization, operational improvements, cybersecurity, and business management.

Wavestone's IT consultancy in the US was formerly known as WGroup, an IT consultancy firm comprised of consultants with over two decades' experience as former C-suite executives and leaders. Following the merger of WGroup and Wavestone in July 2019, the Wavestone US brand was officially launched in January 2020.
