Modern Garage Door Trends You Need to Know About

Modern garage doors have become an increasingly popular trend in recent years for their clean, simple design and multiple construction options. In fact, Ryan Lucia, owner of Aaron Overhead Doors Atlanta, says that “The fastest growing trend we’re seeing in the garage door industry is the demand for modern garage doors. Another trend we’re seeing within the modern trend is a demand for black garage doors.” The style of modern garage doors has evolved greatly in the last few years to include new materials, brands, and styles. Modern garage doors are available in full-view glass, faux or real wood, steel, aluminum, and more. Typically, flushed panels, vertical windows, and industrial metal exteriors characterize modern door design. However, there are numerous way to customize a new garage door to the architecture of any home or business.

Within the category of modern, three new styles have emerged to shape garage door design. These include the fast-trending Farmhouse Modern, classic Mid-Century Modern, and constantly evolving Contemporary Modern. These trends have revamped modern-style doors, bringing garage doors out of suburban cookie-cutter exteriors. With these three styles, you can now design a modern garage door that upgrades both the functionality and beauty of your home.

But on to a bigger question: how do homeowners choose the best modern garage door from the host of popular manufacturers? After years of selling and installing modern garage doors in the Atlanta GA market, Aaron Overhead Doors has determined the best options for modern door brands. This experience has helped them create line-up of the best modern garage door options from their favorite brands including CHI, Clopay, Arm-R-Lite, and Hormann. The “Best of” selections with links to the manufacturer’s pages are:
