

CreditBox Launches New Website with Updated Look

In June 2020, CreditBox launched their new website to provide an enhanced and efficient customer experience.

This launch comes 3 years after the most recent website redesign, and with each update, CreditBox continues to hone in on what is important to the customer and how to improve the experience from start to finish.

CreditBox now provides customers a new minimalistic design, which was created to provide a more streamline process. With a 'less is more' approach, CreditBox focused on making information easy to find and simple to understand, all while offering the convenience of being able to go through the entire loan process from the comfort of your home. No need to leave work or find transportation to a location in order to receive your funds.

“The launch of the new CreditBox website is one we have been extremely excited to announce” says a CreditBox company spokesman. “The customer experience is new and improved and the design and layout focus on getting the customer to the information they require quickly, whether that be a new blog post, a question on the FAQ page or the online application itself.”

Customers can find this website at the same URL, “CreditBox.com” but don’t expect to find the same website. Offering solely an online product, speed of the website was crucial in development. It was also important that contact information be easy to access when customers have questions or would like to discuss the products and application in more depth.

One thing that hasn’t changed with this new website, is the speed of the approval process. The application takes a matter of minutes to complete and someone from the CreditBox customer support team will be in contact moments after the application is submitted. From there, customers can expect to receive their funds as soon as the next day.

With brand new blogs published each week CreditBox continues to provide valuable information to their customers with a range of topics. Within the blog one can find tips on homeownership, how the installment loan process works, to lifestyle topics like the best places to take a weekend trip or money saving party ideas. Important company updates, community events and giveaways can also be found on the CreditBox blog.
