Audubon Fertility Welcomes Dr. Nicole Ulrich to its New Orleans Location

Audubon Fertility is adding a Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility specialist to its clinic to meet growing demand in fertility care.

New Orleans, LA - Based on the clinic's continued growth and success, Audubon Fertility welcomes Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility specialist, Nicole Ulrich, M.D. She will be joining founding partner Dr. Lindsay Wells to further expand premier fertility services for individuals and families across the Greater New Orleans region.

Dr. Ulrich first moved to New Orleans from her native Kentucky to complete her undergraduate degree in Neuroscience and Linguistics at Tulane University. She remained at Tulane University for her medical school training and completed her residency in Obstetrics and Gynecology at the Ochsner Clinic Foundation.

She later moved to Ann Arbor to complete her three-year fellowship in Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility at the University of Michigan. During her time there she completed a research project focused on the pathophysiology of tubal disease, a common cause of infertility, and authored several other papers on topics including ovarian reserve and oncofertility.

"We are thrilled to have Dr. Ulrich join our team at Audubon Fertility! Not only will our patients appreciate her fresh ideas and warm bedside manner, but her experience and passion for the field of Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility will make her an invaluable member of our clinical team," said Audubon Fertility founder Dr. Lindsay Wells. Dr. Ulrich's clinical interests include operative hysteroscopy, evidenced-based approaches to infertility treatment, oncofertility, and transgender medicine. She has a strong commitment to further scientific advancement in the field of Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility and training the next generation of women's health providers.
