

PRESS RELEASE

Basel, Switzerland, October 28th, 2021.

Hospital Pablo Tobón Uribe joins Patient Network Explorer, expanding Clinerion's patient coverage to Colombia.

Hospital Pablo Tobón Uribe, Medellín, is the first hospital in Colombia to join the global network on Clinerion's Patient Network Explorer and bring its patients access to international sponsored clinical trials and thereby to innovative medical interventions.

Hospital Pablo Tobón Uribe is a general hospital with 483 beds, offering all the key medical specializations to the catchment area around Medellín, Colombia. The hospital runs 72 clinical trials per year. The hospital is notable for its academic and clinical research expertise, as it is also a University Hospital that is invested in the education of medical students and in innovating in scientific areas and infrastructure.

Through Patient Network Explorer, patients in Colombia will now be visible to international clinical trials sponsors, increasing the likelihood of their hospital being selected as a trial site and their being accepted to join trials. Patient Network Explorer helps sponsors match their trial protocols to live patient populations in Clinerion's hospital network around the world.

"Clinerion is aggressively expanding its patient coverage around the world and gaining Hospital Pablo Tobón Uribe in Colombia as a partner is a great milestone for us in ensuring support for patients in South America," says Baris Erdogan, CEO of Clinerion. "Colombia is an up-and-coming country with regard to international clinical research and Clinerion is proud to play a role in the development of the local clinical development scene with a view to improving patient outcomes in the country."

About Clinerion
