From a hidden spark in the early days of 2020, the COVID-19 pandemic soon roared across every nation. Rather than uniting people to defeat a common enemy, the pandemic has widened economic, political, and social divisions everywhere.

The pandemic has also surfaced proposals to remake the global economy and society. Is the Great Reset the malevolent scheme of a vast global elite to control the lives of ordinary people or a well-intentioned but dangerously misguided approach to correct systemic ills?

How will the dignity, freedom, and power of each human person be protected and promoted when universal human rights and their Transcendent Source have been rendered irrelevant?

In this book the authors trace the historical, religious, political, and economic roots of humanity's perilous condition and how returning to God-given, universal principles of natural law, can help build a more just, liberating, prosperous, and hopeful future for every person.

“This book forces us to ask if the reset being proposed after the lockdown is in fact a reset at all, or perhaps is actually a retrenchment of inadequate Keynesian policy prescriptions. The Greater Reset is a consideration of what economic personalism and the natural law may have to offer. I am not at all sure that binary economics is the answer, but the refreshing manner in which the argument is made invites a serious conversation which has been lacking up until now. It will be intriguing to watch.”
